APPLICATION FOR A WRIT OF MANDAMUS AGAINST THE HONORABLE SMITH MCPHERSON, DISTRICT JUDGE OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF IOWA, CENTRAL DIVISION, AND AGAINST THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF IOWA, CENTRAL DIVISION.

No. 12, Original. Argued April 5, 1909.—Decided May 3, 1909.

No cause can be removed from the state court to the Circuit Court of the United States unless it could have originally been brought in the latter court. Boston Mining Co. v. Montana Ore Co., 188 U. S. 632, and Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449.

A suit only arises under the Constitution and laws of the United States within the meaning of § 1 of the act of August 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433, conferring jurisdiction on the Circuit Court when the plaintiff's statement of his own cause of action shows that it is based on those laws or that Constitution, and it is not enough that defendant may base his defense thereon. Louisville & Nashville Railroad v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149.

Although a defendant in the state court may set up a defense based on Federal rights which will, if denied, entitle him ultimately to have the decision reviewed by this court, if the Federal question does not appear in the plaintiff's statement the case is not removable to the Circuit Court of the United States.

A writ of mandamus when issued under § 688, Rev. Stat., is for the purpose of revising and correcting proceedings in a case already instituted in the courts and is part of the appellate jurisdiction of this court, which is subject to such regulations as Congress shall make.

Mandamus will lie from this court to compel a Circuit Court to remand a case to the state court where it is apparent from the record that the Circuit Court has no jurisdiction whatever, and the writ will lie even though the party aggrieved may also be entitled to appeal or writ of error.

While mandamus never lies where the party praying therefor has another adequate remedy, an appeal or writ of error at the end of a litigation, which must go for naught, is not an adequate remedy for a plaintiff whose case has been wrongfully removed from the state court to the Circuit Court, and held there against his protest.

213 U. S.

Argument for Petitioner.

The rule that mandamus will not lie to control the judicial discretion of an inferior court does not apply to an attempt of that court to exercise its discretion on subject-matter not within its jurisdiction. In re Pollitz, 206 U. S. 323, and Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436, distinguished.

While a general appearance in the Circuit Court after removal may amount to a waiver of objection to the jurisdiction if some Circuit Court has jurisdiction of the cause, In re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, neither appearance nor consent can confer jurisdiction where no Circuit Court has jurisdiction of the controversy. Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449.

THE facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Guy A. Miller, with whom Mr. W. H. Bremner was on the brief, for petitioner:

Mandamus does not lie to control judicial discretion, except when that discretion has been abused; but it is a remedy when the case is outside of the exercise of this discretion, and outside the jurisdiction of the court or officer to which or to whom the writ is addressed. One of its peculiar and more common uses is to restrain inferior courts, and to keep them within their lawful bounds. Virginia v. Rives (Ex parte Virginia), 100 U. S. 316; Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449; Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436, and Re Pollitz, 206 U. S. 323, distinguished, because in those cases the discretionary powers necessary to defeat the issuance of the writ of mandamus were exercised in connection with matters outside the record.

Want of jurisdiction from any cause appearing on the face of the record, entitles plaintiff to a writ of mandamus where the Federal court refuses to perform the duty to remand, as these cases are outside the discretion and jurisdiction of the court. Cases supra and Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107.

Under §§ 1, 2, 3, of the act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. c. 137, as amended by the act of March 3, 1887, 24 Stat. 552, c. 373, corrected by the act of August 13, 1888, 25 Stat. 433, c. 866, an action commenced in the state court, by a citizen of another

State, against a non-resident defendant, who is a citizen of a State other than that of plaintiff, cannot be removed by the defendant into the Circuit Court, on the ground of diverse citizenship, at least where the plaintiff resists the removal.

Ex parte Wisner, supra.

A case cannot be removed to the Circuit Court from a state court, on the ground that it arises under the laws of the United States, unless that fact appears from the plaintiff's statement of his own claim; and if it does not so appear, the want cannot be supplied by any statement in the petition for removal or in any subsequent pleadings. Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co., 194 U. S. 453; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 453.

It is not enough that in the progress of litigation a question under those laws would arise, since that does not show that plaintiff's action derived its life from those laws. Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149.

The suggestion on the part of the defendant that he will set up a defense or claim under the laws of the United States does not make the suit one arising under those laws. Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, supra; Boston & M. Con. Copper S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Pur. Co., 188 U. S. 632.

Were the plaintiff to admit all the allegations in petition for removal, relative to the act to regulate commerce, it would only show that the plaintiff was unable to recover, and not that this case arises under any law of the United States. Arkansas v. Kansas & Texas Coal Co., 183 U. S. 185.

The question whether or not a shipper is entitled to recover more than the declared value of stock in a contract for interstate shipment does not present a Federal question. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477.

Mr. Nathaniel T. Guernsey, with whom Mr. Alonzo C. Parker and Mr. William E. Miller were on the brief, for respondent:

The jurisdiction of the Circuit Court is beyond question.

213 U. S.

Argument for Respondent.

It affirmatively appears from the pleadings filed by the petitioner, Winn, that the parties are citizens of different States and that the amount in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $2,000. Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449, does not control, because both parties waived any objection which might have been urged to the maintenance of the suit in the Southern District of Iowa. The defendant did this by its petition for removal, general appearance, stipulation for, and filing, cost bond and for time to plead. Construction Company v. Gibney, 160 U. S. 217-220; Re Moore, 209 U. S. 490.

Upon the face of the plaintiff's petition, the case presented questions arising under the laws of the United States.

The character of a case is determined by the questions involved, and if it appears that the claim will be defeated by one construction of a law of the United States or sustained by the opposite construction, it is a case arising under the laws of the United States. Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 248-257; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454; Bankers Casualty Co. v. Minn., St. P. & C. Ry. Co., 192 U. S. 371-380.

This doctrine does not conflict with the line of cases holding that a Federal question may not be imported into a case by the averments of the answer. Upon the face of the petition filed in the state court, the case necessarily involved the determination of whether the contract limiting the liability of the defendant to $50 is valid under the provisions of § 20 of the act to regulate commerce as amended by § 7 of the Hepburn Act, which has already been considered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, Matter of Released Rates, 13 Interstate Comm. Comm. 550, but has not been authoritatively determined by the courts. Penna. R. R. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, having been decided prior to the Hepburn Act, is not in point.

Also whether the special contract to haul the hog in a single covered wagon is valid, it being a special service not covered by a tariff. Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512.

Also whether misrepresentation, by the shipper, of the value of the hog, in order to secure a lower rate, was a violation of the act to regulate commerce; and if so, its effect upon the plaintiff's claim.

Mandamus is not the proper remedy. The determination of the motion to remand involved an exercise of judicial judgment and discretion, which must be reviewed, if at all, by appeal. In re Pollitz, 206 U. S. 330; Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436.

MR. JUSTICE MOODY delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an application for a writ of mandamus to the District Judge of the United States, acting as Circuit Judge, for the Southern District of Iowa, Central Division. The prayer of the petition was for a rule to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue commanding the Judge to remand the case to the state court in which it was originally brought. The rule was issued and cause was shown by a return. From the petition and the return the following state of facts appears: The petitioner, as assignee of the right of action of a shipper, brought in a state court of Iowa, an action at law against the American Express Company for the negligent transportation of a boar, whereby the animal was killed, to the damage, it was alleged, to the owner of $8,000. The transportation was under a written contract between the owner and the defendant, which was annexed to the declaration as an exhibit. The shipment was from a point in Iowa to a point in Nebraska. The citizenship of the plaintiff or his assignor was not alleged, but the defendant was alleged to be a citizen of New York. The defendant seasonably filed in the state court a petition for removal to the Circuit Court of the United States, with accompanying bond in proper form. The petition having been denied in the state court, the defendant duly filed a copy of the record in the Circuit Court of the United States, and it was there docketed, whereupon plaintiff moved to remand the case, and the motion was denied by the Circuit Judge. The plaintiff thereupon, without further action in the Circuit Court, began this proceeding.

The petition for removal alleged that the plaintiff was a citizen of Missouri and the defendant "a joint stock association organized under the laws of the State of New York," but contained no allegation of the citizenship of the members of the association. It was agreed at the argument that the defendant was not a corporation but a joint stock association. Therefore the diversity of citizenship required to warrant a removal on that ground does not appear. The petition for removal, which is printed in the margin,¹ was not based upon diversity

That your said petitioner was, at the time of the bringing of this suit, and still is a joint stock association, organized under the laws of the State of New York, in such cases made and provided, and that the plaintiff was then and still is a citizen of the State of Missouri.

Your petitioner further shows that the said suit is one of a civil nature, in which the plaintiff seeks to recover from the defendant the sum of eight thousand dollars ($8,000.00) as damages on account of an alleged failure on the part of the defendant to comply with its obligations as a common carrier in the shipment and transportation of a hog, which the assignor of plaintiff offered to the defendant and which the defendant received from the assignor of plaintiff on or about the 30th day of August, A. D. 1907, for transportation from the State Fair Grounds at Des Moines in the State of Iowa, to the city of Lincoln, in the State of Nebraska.

That the defendant denies that it failed in any respect to perform its obligations with reference to the transportation of the said hog, and denies that it is liable upon the claim set up in the said suit, in any amount, and denies that, in any event, its liability could exceed the sum or value of fifty dollars ($50.00).

That the said suit is one arising under the laws of the United States. That your petitioner is, and was, at all the times mentioned in the petition in this suit a common carrier engaged in trade and commerce between the several States of the United States, and between the Territories thereof, and between the Territories and the several States.

That at the date of the shipment in question your petitioner was, and ever since that time has been, subject to the provisions of the act of Congress, entitled "An Act to Regulate Commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and of the acts of Congress amendatory thereof and supplementary of citizenship but upon the ground that the suit was one arising under the laws of the United States.

It is well settled that no cause can be removed from the state court to the Circuit Court of the United States unless it could originally have been brought in the latter court. Boston &c. Mining Co. v. Montana Ore Co., 188 U. S. 632; 640; Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449.

The only ground of jurisdiction which is or can be suggested thereto, and that the alleged cause of action set up in said suit is based upon, grows out of and necessarily involves the construction of said acts of Congress. That among the questions arising under said acts and necessarily involved in said suit are—

(a) Whether the contract on which said suit is based is legal and enforceable by the shipper or the plaintiff as his assignee in view of the fact that it appears on the face of this contract that if the claim made in the petition as to the value of the hog in question is true, the shipper, by means of its undervaluation, violated the penal provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce as amended.

(b) Whether, under the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended, the plaintiff may assert a claim for damages in an amount in excess of the value declared by the shipper to be the true value, and, upon this declaration, made the basis of the rate for the interstate transportation in question.

(c) Whether, under the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended, the provisions of the contract in suit, limiting the liability of the defendant to the sum declared by the shipper in said contract to be the actual value of the animal in question, is valid and enforceable.

(d) Whether, under the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended, the plaintiff, as assignee of the shipper, is estopped to set up in this suit that the hog in question was of a greater value than the value declared to be its true value in the contract sued upon.

(e) Whether the undervaluation of the hog in question by the shipper in order to obtain a rate for its interstate transportation lower than the published established rate constituted a violation by the shipper of the penal provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended.

(f) Whether, if said penal provisions were so violated, the plaintiff's suit is founded upon what in law is his own wrong so as to preclude a recovery by him.

(g) Other questions arising under said Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended.

213 U. S.

Opinion of the Court.

is that the suit was one arising under the Constitution and the laws of the United States. 25 Stat. 433, 434. It is the settled interpretation of these words, as used in this statute conferring jurisdiction, that a suit arises under the Constitution and laws of the United States only when the plaintiff's statement of his own cause of action shows that it is based upon those laws or that Constitution. It is not enough, as the law now exists, that it appears that the defendant may find in the Constitution or laws of the United States some ground of defense. Louisville & Nashville Railroad v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, and cases cited. If the defendant has any such defense to the plaintiff's claim it may be set up in the state courts, and if properly set up and denied by the highest court of the State may ultimately be brought to this court for decision.

Tested by these principles, the record, including the petition for removal, shows affirmatively that the case was not one arising under the laws of the United States. In substance, the allegations of the petition for removal are, that the defendant was subject to the Federal laws to regulate commerce, and that under those laws the defendant had a defense in whole or in part to the cause of action stated in the declaration. But the cause of action itself is not based upon the interstate commerce law or upon any other law of the United States. The case could not have been brought originally in the Circuit Court of the United States, and was therefore not removable thereto. In holding otherwise we think the learned Judge of the Circuit Court erred.

It is, however, argued that mandamus is not the remedy for the correction of such an error as we have pointed out, and that the aggrieved party should be left to his writ of error—a remedy which he undoubtedly has.

Authority to issue writs of mandamus to any courts appointed under the authority of the United States was given to this court by a provision in the original Judiciary Act, which now appears in § 688 of the Revised Statutes. A writ of mandamus issued under this provision is for the purpose of revising and correcting proceedings in a case already instituted in the courts, and is deemed a part of the appellate jurisdiction of this court, which is subject to such regulations as the Congress shall make. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cr. 137; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 97; In re Green, 141 U. S. 325, 326.

In Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. 190, the court of its own motion considered and sustained its authority to issue mandamus to inferior courts, and in that case directed by mandamus a judge of an inferior court to sign a bill of exceptions duly presented. Since that time writs of mandamus to inferior courts have been issued in all proper cases.

In Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. 364, it was held that a mandamus from this court would lie to an inferior court of the United States, directing it to restore an attorney to the rolls who had been disbarred, where the court was without jurisdiction in that regard. And it was said, page 377: "The ground of our decision . . . is, that the court below had no jurisdiction to disbar the relator. . . . No amount of judicial discretion of a court can supply a defect or want of jurisdiction in the case. The subject-matter is not before it; the proceeding is coram non judice and void."

A specific application of the general principle announced in Ex parte Bradley has been made to cases where Circuit Courts of the United States have, without authority, assumed jurisdiction of a case originally brought in a state court, and it has frequently been held that mandamus from this court would lie to compel a Circuit Court to remand a case to the state court where it is apparent from the record that the Circuit Court has no jurisdiction whatever of the case. Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107; Kentucky v. Powers, 201 U. S. 1; Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449. And see Matter of Dunn, 212 U. S. 374. In such a situation the remedy by mandamus is available, although the aggrieved party may also be entitled to a writ of error or an appeal. Mandamus, it is true, never lies where the party praying for it has another adequate remedy. The writ of mandamus was introduced to supplement the existing jurisdiction of the courts and to afford relief in extraordinary cases where the law presents no adequate remedy. High on Extraordinary Legal Remedies, 3d ed., § 15. But where, without any right, a court of the United States has wrested from a state court the control of a suit pending in it an appeal or writ of error, at the end of long proceedings, which must go for naught, is not an adequate remedy.

In Virginia v. Rives, supra, the State, after the cause had been removed to the Circuit Court, filed its petition in this court for mandamus, without having made a motion to remand in the Circuit Court, but in the opinion nothing turned on the absence of a motion to remand, and the remedy by mandamus was held to exist "when the case is outside of the exercise of (judicial discretion), and outside the jurisdiction of the Court . . . to which . . . the writ is addressed. One of its peculiar and more common uses is to restrain inferior courts and to keep them within their lawful bounds," p. 323. Ex parte Bradley is then referred to and its discussion approved. Then followed Ex parte Hoard, 105 U. S. 578, where it is held that if the Circuit Court had denied a motion to remand to the state court the party aggrieved must resort to his writ of error, and that mandamus would be denied, without determining whether the case was properly removed or not. In the three following cases, however, Virginia v. Paul, Kentucky v. Powers, and Ex parte Wisner, supra, the Circuit Court had denied motions to remand (the denial of the motion in Kentucky v. Powers, appearing in the judgment of the court below, 139 Fed. Rep. 452) before the petition for mandamus was filed. Nevertheless, the writ of mandamus was issued upon the ground that it was plain as matter of law from the record itself that the Circuit Court was without jurisdiction. This must now be regarded as the settled law.

The respondent, however, insists that mandamus will not lie to control the judgment or judicial discretion of the court to which the writ is proposed to be directed. This is true where the judgment or judicial discretion is within the limits of jurisdiction, but not otherwise. Wherever the record, including the petition for removal, shows that there are questions of fact upon whose determination the right of removal depends and upon which it is the duty of the Circuit Court to pass judicially, then there is jurisdiction to decide those questions. Their decision is the exercise of judicial discretion, and if that discretion is erroneously exercised it can be corrected only by a writ of error or appeal. In these cases writs of mandamus must not be permitted to usurp the functions of writs of error or appeals or take their place where they offer an adequate remedy to the aggrieved party. It is only in cases where the record makes it clear, as matter of law, that the Circuit Court was without jurisdiction to take any action whatever that the writ of mandamus lies. This distinction has been acted on many times by this court, and it is enough to refer to two very recent cases. Thus where the removability of a case turned upon the question whether there was a separable controversy, to the trial of which certain of the defendants were not indispensable or necessary parties, it was held that the Circuit Court had jurisdiction to determine the question of separability; that its decision in that respect was the exercise of judicial discretion and could not be controlled by a writ of mandamus. In re James Pollitz, 206 U. S. 323. The same point was decided in Ex parte Nebraska, 209 U. S. 436. In each of these cases a distinction was made between it and a case where on the face of the record absolutely no jurisdiction has attached, and the right to a writ of mandamus in the latter case was affirmed.

As we have shown, the want of jurisdiction of the Circuit Court appears clearly on the record in the case at bar, and does not, as in In re Pollitz and Ex parte Nebraska, depend upon findings of fact which the Circuit Court had jurisdiction to make. We think, therefore, it is clear that the writ of mandamus ought to issue.

A subordinate question must receive some attention. It is said that the petitioner in this case appeared generally in the

213 U. S.

Opinion of the Court.

Circuit Court after the removal of the case, and thereby waived his right to object to the jurisdiction, and In re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, is cited in support of the position. But that case simply held that where there was a diversity of citizenship, which gave jurisdiction to some Circuit Court, the objection that there was no jurisdiction in a particular district might be waived by appearing and pleading to the merits, and anything to the contrary said in Ex parte Wisner, 203 U. S. 449, was overruled, though the Wisner case was otherwise left untouched. See Western Loan Co. v. Butte & Boston Mining Co., 210 U. S. 368, 369. Here, however, is a case where, upon its face, no Circuit Court of the United States had jurisdiction of the controversy, originally or by removal. In such a case the consent of the parties cannot confer jurisdiction. Louisville & Nashville R. R. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, and cases cited.

The rule is made absolute and the writ of mandamus awarded.
